"I was lucky enough to join the prestigious Maison Edmond de Rothschild France in Paris in Middle Office Asset Management."

For my 6-month internship in Finance, I was lucky enough to join the prestigious Maison Edmond de Rothschild France in Paris in Middle Office Asset Management. I integrated very well into a team of about ten people. I really felt like I was arriving in a family where everyone took care of each other.

In addition, I did not imagine that a financial institution would develop so many values focused on social and sustainable development, and I was pleasantly surprised. I think the internship was successful since my skills in finance and fund management have improved significantly.

Above all, I am now part of the Rothschild Group's intern community and at my request, I was able to spend a few half-days with fund managers, the risk department and in financial engineering.

During my internship, I realized that this internship was a real springboard for my future professional life. Indeed, even before I finished my internship, two companies had already offered me two permanent contracts before I had even finished my studies.

"An internship in this prestigious company opens many doors in the future and looks very good on a resume."

My internship took place in the finance department of KPMG in Kazakhstan, I joined the company as an accounting trainee. My objective was to keep systematic records of transactions and provide accurate financial data.

An internship in this prestigious company opens many doors in the future and looks very good on a resume. Most importantly, it is a great opportunity to get professional experience and make useful connections. Thus, I was inspired and thrilled to show my best side and maximum productivity.

This internship allowed me to get an understanding of what is it like to work in a large company, surrounded by the most qualified specialists. I managed to establish contacts with my managers and remain on good terms with many colleagues to this day. I am sure this experience, and the connections that I made will be useful to me throughout my future career.

"This experience was fantastic! I learned a lot about how a professional environment works and quickly felt like I was part of the company."

I wanted to complete my internship experience abroad in an English-speaking environment so that I could apply and develop the skills and knowledge I acquired during my first year at CEFAM.

This experience was fantastic! I learned a lot about how a professional environment works and quickly felt like I was part of the company.

During my internship, I was in a small working environment which allowed me to gain an understanding of different sectors of activity. My tasks ranged from creating spreadsheets, to model data sets, to translating documents for CBXP's international clients.

Having the opportunity to understand what is expected of you in a business climate and learning about a foreign work environment while still being a student is great. I am grateful that I was able to experience this.

"My managers have helped me to improve and surpass myself. I had an unforgettable experience working in a very large company."

For my 6-month internship I was looking for a company with an eco-responsible, societal dimension with a positive impact. I came across NAOS, a company that champions ecobiology and puts skin health first. NAOS is made up of 3 brands. Bioderma, Esthederm Institute and Pure State.

My managers have helped me to improve and surpass myself. I had an unforgettable experience working in a very large company. I came out of it even richer and with the necessary skills to continue my professional career.

As a Trade Marketing Assistant for Bioderma, my main missions were to deploy trade marketing actions, competitive intelligence, field missions, personalized projects for our customers, and ensure customer relations with small attentions (sending news, boxes...) and many others. It was a very rich internship because I had a lot of varied tasks.

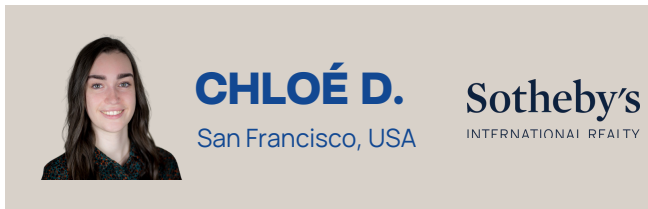

"If I could give one piece of advice to students, I would tell them not to be afraid to leave your comfort zone because there is so much to learn and discover on the other side of the world."

I completed my internship in Japan with the company "Chinriu Honten LTD.", which is a family business more than 150 years old. I was lucky enough to join and contribute to this company, which has been evolving internationally.

Thanks to this internship I learned a lot about the world of international business, including cultural and linguistic differences. If I could give one piece of advice to students, I would tell them not to be afraid to leave your comfort zone because there is so much to learn and discover on the other side of the world.

As an international sales intern, my main tasks were sales and marketing. I oversaw our stock in the international subsidiaries. I completed market studies and helped improve the company's website.

"During this internship, I expected to learn how the luxury real estate business works in the U.S., so I could see if I wanted to pursue this kind of career."

I decided to do my first-year internship in the U.S., so I could learn more about American work culture and lifestyle.

I had the chance to visit and see the available houses on the market. I consider my internship a success because I was able to learn how luxury real estate works, American culture (at work and home), and business practices.

I applied at Sotheby's International Realty in San Francisco because they have a prestigious and international reputation. During this internship, I expected to learn how the luxury real estate business works in the U.S., so I could see if I wanted to pursue this kind of career.

Most of my missions consisted of creating or updating lists of commercial real estate agents, probate attorneys, and Sotheby's managers.
